DECLARES GIFFORD PINCHOT

Tas No Comment to Make on Recent Events but He Proposes to Stay in the Fight.

tion of natural resources and the con-servation of popular government are both at stake. The one needs conservation no less than the other, night by Gifford Pinchot, recently re-moved as chief of the forest service. The former official declares the great try is not the loss of natural resources so much as whether special interests or the people shall rule. The statement in part is as follows:

PINCHOT'S STATEMENT.

"At this time I have no comment to make on recent events. Whether in or out of the government service I propose to stay in the fight for conservation and equal opportunity. Every movement and measure from whatever source, that tends to advance conservation and promote government by men for human welfare, I shall try to help. Every movement and measure from whatever source that hinders conservation and promotes government by money or profit, I shall endeavor to oppose. The supreme test of movements and measures is the welfare of the plain people. I am as ready to support the administration when it moves toward this paramount end as away."

Mr. Pinchot expresses his profound regret at leaving the forest service and pays tribute to the faithfulness and high quality of service rendered by the men with whom he worked. Out of the work of the forest service, he declares, grew the conservation movement.

"Today that movement expresses one of our deepest national convictions," he says, "and the principles for which it stands are received as axiomatic. It is only the execution of that which remains in doubt.

"The great conference of governors in the White House in May, 1908, led to the appointment of the national conservation commission whose report gave us a new conception of the value of our national resources. It told us what is needed for their prompt and orderly development and for their safety and perpetuation.

commendations for the protection of forests against fire and for equitable forest taxation.

"The classification of the public domain was strongly urged and principles for its use and disposition were laid down. The necessity for preserving the fertility of our soils and developing their agricultural value by drainage and otherwise was covered, and particular attention was given to the needs of retaining our phosphate lands, then in danger of absorption by a foreign syndicate."

Mr. Pinchot then traced the recommendations of the conference, applauding and indorsing them all.

"In a word," he said, "the report of the commission and the message, taken together, set forth a comprehensive, definite statement for the conservation of our natural resources.

A CRITICAL PERIOD.

A CRITICAL PERIOD.

"At this critical period, when the goal was in sight, enemies of conservation in Congress not only succeeded in preventing an appropriation with which to pursue the work, but attempted to forbid its progress by the Tawney amendment to the last sundry civil bill. Thereupon the work of the national conservation commission was stopped.

tempted to forbid its progress by the Tawney amendment to the last sundry civil bill. Thereupon the work of the national conservation commission was stopped.

The recommendations of the commission still wait for action. All wise men will agree that the situation is serious. The Tawney amendment was more than a mistake—It was deliberate betrayal of the future. The dangers which confront the conservation commission today must be met with positive action in Congress, No action will be equivalent to bad action, and will have the same results. Unless Congress acts, the water powers will pass into the hands of special interests without charge and without limit of time. So with the phosphate deposits on public lands, when the withdrawals which now protect them are removed. So with the enormously valuable coal deposits in Alaska, which the present law would sell for $10 per acre.

"The danger of legislation is no less serious. The special interests must no longer be allowed to take what they choose out of the great property of all the people. Those who steal public lands steal homes from men and women who need them. Congress can stop the pillage, or Congress can let it go on. "In the absence of proper action two great conservation plans for the public welfare may fail. The first is the control of water powers on navigable streams in the public interest. The second is the construction of the deep waterway from the Great Lakes to the Guif.

"The unanimous opinion of the Mississippi valely recognizes this waterways as a commercial necessity. It believes, with reason, that the cost for which is already officially known, will be trivial when compared with the benefits conferred. Transportation facilities create traffic. The failure to develop our waterways, together with adequate terminals and connections by rail, leaves to the railroads a complete monopoly of transportation in the Mississippi valley."

The former forester then calls upon every "man of good will" to make it clear to his representatives in Congress his firm

GREAT IMMEDIATE DANGER.

"The first great immediate danger is that the water powers will be lost; the second that the coal lands will be the second that the coal lands will be lost.

The statement concludes: "But these specific dangers of public loss are merely parts of the great issues between the special interests and the rest of us. That issue is whether this country shall be managed by men for human welfare, or by money for profit.

"It is a tremendous issue, far greater than any man's personal feelings or personal fortunes. It lies between the people and their representatives on one side, and the interests and their representatives on the other side; between progress and reaction; between special privileges and square deal. I repeat that the supreme test is the welfare of the plain people. It is time to apply it."

Government officials tonight declined

Government officials tonight declined Government officials tonight declined to make any reply to the statement is-sued by Mr. Pinchot, because, owing to the lateness of the hour at which it was given out, they did not have time to examine it carefully. It is not be-lieved, however, that any formal reply will be made to Mr. Pinchot's defense of his action, inasmuch as he no longer is an official of the government.

HARRY KENTZEL ALONE SURVIVED CZARINA WRECK

Marshfield, Or., Jan. 13.—Another tragedy of the sea has been written into the record of marine disasters on the grim north Pacific coast, though the loss of the staunch iron steamship Czarina on the north spit of the Coos Bay bar, with a load of 30 lives.

A solitary survivor, Harry Kentzel, first assistant engineer of the wrecked vessel, is the only living testimonial to the heroic efforts made by the United States life saving crew and citizens of Marshfield to aid the doomed ship's company.

ompany. Kentzel's escape is a wonderful story Kentzel's escape is a wonderful story of man's endurance and physical strength. When the ship piled on the rocks, with six or seven others he took to the rigging of the foremast. Piled high by the gale, sea after sea smashed over the vessel, the decks were awash and wreckage was floating about. Suddenly a tremendous sea swept the ship and Kentzel and his companions were washed from their places. Kentzel was swept toward land, but time and time again was carried out to sea by the shifting currents. He is a strong man, and after fighting for what seemed to him ages, he managed to get hold of a piece of timber, and was slowly driven shoreward.

As he neared the beach he could see the rescuers running up and down. Then consciousness left him, and he knew nothing more until he came to on the beach alongside a big fire. He had been snatched from the water by the watchers, and was brought back to life after several hours' vigorous treatment. He is in the hands of physicians, and tonight is on the road to recovery. Kentzel resides in San Francisco.

WHISKEY FOR LAME BACK

The increased use of whiskey for lame back and rheumatism is causing considerable discussion among the medical fraternity. It is an almost infallible cure when mixed with certain other ingredients and taken properly. The following is the formula: "To one half pint of good whiskey add one ounce of Toris compound and one ounce syrup Sarsaparilla compound. Take in tablespoonful doses before each meal and before retiring."

tive That Government Act.

New York, Jan. 14.—"Government action in regard to the rise in the cost of living is daily becoming imperative," says Pro. E. R. A. Sellgman of Columbia university, an international authority on economics and finances, in a statement made public here today. "The situation is really so serious," onlined Prof. Sellgman, "that the government should awaken to it. As a partial remedy, the nation's leaders are called upon to devise some better method of money circulation. The constant increase in the supply of gold in the world is making its purchasing power less. It takes more gold to buy the same commodity and so everywhere prices are rising.

"There are other contributory causes The rise in the cost of meat, is, for instance, caused by the increase of irrigation and agricultural development in the west. It has become more profiable to raise crops than to development in the west. It has become more profiable to raise crops than to development in the year.
